A Rainbow of Friends, by P. K. Hallinan, is a children's picture book that teaches that everyone has some things in common and some things that are different. Students with disabilities are not singled out in this book as different, but are included in a list of examples showing kids are have different things that make them unique: being funny, clothing preferences, speech, movement, etc.

A Rainbow of Friends - Lisa Goodell
A Rainbow of Friends is literally referring to everyone, we can all be friends no matter our abilities, our skin color, our place of origin. this is very appropriate for children to read and hear because we all need to learn to accept each other regardless of our need to categorize people and keep them in this contained image.
